Annotation. The ideas, rules, and laws of human education were initially based on stories, pandemons, written monuments, and folklore, and later on, they strengthen their position as an independent science. Indeed, our ancestors paid special attention to child education from time immemorial. Imam al-Bukhari, -Isa at-Tirmizny, Berunny, Az-Zamakhshari, Navoi, Babur, Ogahi, great scientists, writers, virtuous people like Abdurafitit, Abdulhamid Cholpon, wrote many works on education. "The City of Virtuous People" by Faroq Bey, who is considered the founder of Eastern pedagogy, "Qutadgu Bilig" by Yusuf Khos Hajib, "Mahbub ul-Qulub" by Alisher Navoi, "Nightmare" by Kaikovus, and "Futuvvatnami Sultani" by Baiz Koshf are proof of this. It is known from history that Eastern pedagogy once flourished. When the German scientist Herler said, "The East is the teacher of Europe", he probably meant this period of development.
